"Since I began my work with Water.org, my goal has always been to help people reach their full human potential by giving them access to the basic resources that so many of us take for granted," said Matt Damon, Water.org Co-Founder. "As our financial tools and platforms evolve, not only can we use them for good, like we are doing through this partnership that supports donations via crypto, but I am happy to do it with a like-minded partner that is committed to transforming lives through equity and access."

"We are very proud to be working alongside Matt Damon and Water.org to directly support their mission while also encouraging crypto users across the globe to join us in this effort. The success and true potential of cryptocurrency will only come to pass when the greatest number of people have access to the tools needed to be in full control of our own lives, finances and futures," said Kris Marszalek, Co-Founder and CEO of Crypto.com.

Crypto.com is the fastest growing cryptocurrency platform in the world. The company boasts the world's most popular crypto-card, the Crypto.com Visa Card which seamlessly bridges the traditional financial world with crypto, making it the safest and most accessible way for new users to tap into the future of finance. The company's commitment to mainstreaming crypto stems from their belief that crypto has the potential to give people control over their money, data and identity in a way that truly allows for financial freedom, control and self-determination. Through a focus on building a regulated business in every market where the company operates, Crypto.com is a leader accelerating the world's transition to cryptocurrency. Crypto.com is committed to addressing the climate crisis, and has pledged to be a carbon-negative business before the end of 2022.
